Dear Sir or Madam,

With reference to APP/2021/0121

I wish to state my continued objection to the proposal.

This proposal is open ended with no firm date given for the removal of the two turbines, assuming that they will be removed and a derelict site is not the result.

The turbines are profitable for investors, if they were not then they wouldn't have been built, this is only greed funded by the Scottish tax payer.

Given the huge progress towards more efficient offshore turbines which have many benefits due to there size and vastly increased output and no noise or shadow flicker problems.

These new ventures will make onshore turbines redundant and with there removal return the Scottish landscape to the way it should be.

There is no doubt climate change is happening but with various other technologies up and coming onshore turbines can be phased out at the end of their planned life.

Bids have been accepted for the various offshore project around the north coast which will power all the homes in Scotland.

In addition the Government is due to rule on a further 72 turbine offshore project off the Angus coast that has the potential to power a further 1.1 million homes giving a surplus of energy.

Regards

Bill Connon
